BADLY DECOMPOSED

The Suicide James A. Fiske's Body When Found Yesterday.

Had Been Dead Several Days -Letter Left Indicating Domestic Trouble as the Cause

The partially decomposed body of James A Fiske was found yesterday afternoon about 1 o'clock in a bed at his home just beyond and opposite the fair grounds

Two letters, written by Fiske just before he ended his life, for he suicided, disclosed that his act was prompted by domestic trouble. Fiske was originally from Rhode Island and before coming to Lima lived in California where he met and married Miss Oniska McCullough, of this city, several years ago. They came to Lima about a year ago and until the past four or five weeks lived in a house upon Mrs. Fiske's portion of the McCullough estate, at the intersection of the Bellefontaine road and Kibby street.

The fore part of last month Mrs. Fiske left for the west leaving Fiske here. He lived in two of the down stairs rooms, taking his meals either at Ed Baker's, or in the city. A family named Grange occupied the other portion of the house, the only door connecting the house being locked from the opposite side. Saturday evening the Grange family detected a disagreeable odor in the house and could not locate the cause. Sunday morning the stench still prevailed and the little children in playing about the yard noticed the window of one of the rooms occupied by Fiske covered with flies. They told the fact which led to the discovery of Fiske's dead body in bed. Coroner Steuber and undertaker Grosjean were summoned and the body taken in charge. The body was badly decomposed and swollen to twice its natural size and gave forth an awful stench. There was a stand at the head of the bed upon which was a number of books, papers, etc, among which were two letters addressed to his wife. They were folded up and an empty ounce phial, which had contained morphine, was sitting on top of them. A cigar, partially smoked and in a holder, was lying on the stand as if it had been laid there while he began writing the letters. Fiske had on his underdrawers and shirt and the bed clothes were pulled about half way up. He was lying on his back and had

DIED WITHOUT A STRUGGLE.

The first letter, dated June 12th, 1895, was written with a lead pencil on a common piece of writing paper, as follows:

ONISKA- This is the last letter. I have tried to arrange things for the best and you have baffled me on every side. You went away and left me with a number of debts to pay and no way of paying them. You went away and I was the one to get it all. I was willing to do the best I could, but when I heard of your sayings, and then to take Granny Smith to be over me, one you had commended, I do not care to stay, but let you and Granny run the place to the best you can, and I know you have no love for me. If you had, you would not have treated me the way you have. But I'll forgive you as I hope to be forgiven, and now, all I have here and back east and in California is yours to do with and to enjoy the best you can, after ruining my life. You are the cause of this rash act and you alone. I hope that you will carry your head as high as you have and try and deceive your friends, to make them think you are an angel. * * * Oniska, Ed Baker owes me $7.48 for potatoes. You can collect that and buy a present and think it is from JIMMIE.

The other letter was written in ink upon a Burnet House letter head, and was also dated June 12th, 1895. It reads as follows:

ONISKA —You have ruined me and all my good resolutions. You have deceived me for the last time. You want others to attend to your affairs and I will no longer stand in your way. I will give up my life before I will stand any more of this, and then you can set your sails as you think best. You want every dollar you see and more, and I hope you will be happy and try to bring some other fellow down. * * * You have tried to deceive your friends. * * * I have said enough to let people know that you are no angel. You have led me a life of sorrow. I wish you happiness with your ill-gotten wealth and may you live long and be happy and think of the one you have driven to an early grave. I hope that you will keep this to remember me and to look and see the love I had for you. Good night.

JAMES A. FISKE,
Lima, Ohio.

On the back of another letter, addressed to him, he had written the following instructions to Coroner Steuber

After you have read and published these letters I wish you would be kind enough to send them to that kind and loving wife that has caused me to give up this life for the unknown, and I want you to collect $6 from Stephen Sweet, who works for Ed Baker, and pay the same to Sims Bros., who keep a fruit store on west High street, as I owe them $5, and Johnson, who runs the bath-house at McCullough's lake $1 owe him, and one other I owe thirty-five cents, which you will find in my pocket, at a drug store in the Fisk block, Main and Wayne streets. The rest is hers, and when I see you I will thank you if you'll come my way.

JAMES A. FISKE.

The bed clothing was taken out into the yard and burned and the rooms thoroughly fumigated. The remains, after being placed in a casket, were taken to Grosjean's, from which place they were taken to Woodlawn and buried at 6 o'clock last evening. A telegram announcing his death by suicide was sent to Mrs. Fiske, who is in San Francisco, Cal.

Fiske was about 48 years of age and while the letters bear the date of Wednesday, June 12th, it is not thought he took the morphine until Friday night, as several persons claim to have seen him in the city as late as Friday evening, among them Harry Johnson, who loaned Fiske $1 that afternoon He was also seen in the drug store in the Fisk block that afternoon.

FRIGHTFUL ACCIDENT.

A Young Girl Run Down by a L. E. & W. Train.

Yesterday morning about 1 o'clock a L E & W. freight train ran into a buggy containing Frank Moore and Miss Flora Evans, at Portland, Ind. The girl's left arm and right leg were crushed so badly they had to be amputated.

According to the report from the operator at Portland, east bound freight train No. 57, Engineer Chas. Greenland and Conductor Jno Purcell, hit the vehicle, but none of the entire crew knew of the accident until they learned of it through the operator's report. The members of the crew are some of the most useful men on the L. E. & W., and how the accident occurred without their knowledge is a mystery.

Taking a Spin

On the wheel will be the most enjoyable way to spend the 4th. What is more like the emblematic bird bird of freedom than a Cleveland Swell bicycle? Like an eagle you "fly" over miles of country, a feeling of freedom and exhiliration so filling mind and body that you are "rested" after a twenty-five mile run, and a "half century" run doesn't fatigue. But get the right wheel. That's the Victor and the Waverly, and 38 others of good make, at

Two More Bings.

The fire department made two more runs Saturday evening. The first alarm was from box 21 at the C., H. & D. shops, when some charcoal in a shed had caught from a fire while some rubbish was being burned. The department arrived in good time and the flames were easily extinguished.

The second alarm came from box 73 at High and Baxter streets. Some one had set fire to the unsightly bill boards near that corner, but the flames were quickly extinguished.

The Only Remedy in the World that Refunds Purchase Price if it Fails to Cure the Tobacco Habit in 4 to 10 Days is

Narcoti-Cure

It Cures While You Continue the Use of Tobacco.

The greatest discovery of the age.
A certain, pleasant, permanent cure.
A lifetime's suffering ended for $5.00.

Why smoke and spit your life away? Why suffer from dyspepsia, heartburn, and drains on your vital forces?

Stop using tobacco, but stop the right way! Drive the nicotine from your system by the use of this wonderful remedy.

NARCOTI-CURE is warranted to remove all desire for tobacco in every form, including Cigar, Cigarette and Pipe Smoking, Chewing and Snuff Taking.

Use all the tobacco you want while under treatment, and in from four to ten days your "hankering" and "craving" will disappear—the weed won't taste good.

Then throw away tobacco forever.

NARCOTI-CURE is entirely vegetable and free from injurious ingredients. It never fails to give tone and new vigor to the weakest constitution.

Remember NARCOTI-CURE doesn't deprive you of tobacco while effecting a cure; doesn't ask you to buy several bottles to be entitled to a guarantee; doesn't require a month's treatment; and, finally, doesn't enable you to stop tobacco only to find yourself a slave to the habit of tablet chewing.

With NARCOTI-CURE, when you are through with tobacco, you are through with the remedy. One bottle cures.

Gentlemen:—I have used tobacco for over twenty-five years, chewing and smoking every day from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m., stopping only for meals.

On Monday, February 4, I called at your office in Springfield, and bought a bottle of the CURE which I used as directed, and on the tenth day the desire for tobacco had left me and it has not returned. I did not lose a meal while taking the CURE. My appetite has improved and I consider NARCOTI-CURE a grand thing.

Very respectfully,
CHAS. I. LINCOLN.

Mr. Frank H. Morton, of Chicopee Falls, Mass., late Inspector of Public Buildings for Massachusetts, says:

I used tobacco for twenty-five years and was a confirmed smoker. In just eight days' treatment with NARCOTI-CURE I was through with tobacco, in fact the desire for tobacco vanished like a dream.

Very respectfully,
FRANK H. MORTON.

A MONSTER FACTORY.

Government Cigarette Works, Seville, Employ 2,000 Women and Girls.

One of the sights of Seville which no tourist misses is the cigarette factory, in which the government employs nearly 2,000 women and girls. The showing about of visitors is accordingly looked upon as a regular source of income by the porter and matrons. After getting permission to enter you are placed in charge of a matron, who shows you through her own department and then passes you on to another, and so on, until your stock of pesetas and half pesetas, put aside for fees, is exhausted.

These matrons accompany the visitors, not in order to prevent the girls from flirting with them—nothing could do that—but to see that no tobacco, picadura or cigarettes may disappear. Before entering each room a bell is rung to warn the girls, who are in great disabille on account of the sun, to put on their wrappers, and as the door opens scores of round arms and pretty shoulders are seen disappearing, while several hundred pairs of coal black eyes are fastened on you.

The passages are lined with cradles, and the young girl mothers to whom they belong implore you with eyes and hands for a penny for the Murillos of the future lying in them. These girls are more frank than subtle in their flirtations. There is not one in the crowd who will not be immediately conscious of a man's gaze fixed on her, nor will she be the first to turn her eyes away. Some will wink and even throw a kiss from a distant corner at the rich Englese—all foreigners are supposed to be wealthy Englishmen.

They are a merry lot on the whole, these poor girls, the quickest of whom make only 2 shillings a day, for which they have to toil 10 to 12 hours. They are allowed to smoke if they wish, and they make use of this privilege. They are remarkably deft at rolling the cigarettes, but not all seem eager to make as many as possible, for some are idling and others are asleep, but no one cares, as each one is paid according to the number she twists up, aided only by a piece of specially made cartridge paper and a small tin affair on her little finger. —Pittsburg Dispatch.

If it required an annual outlay of $100.00 to insure a family against any serious consequences from an attack of bowel complaint during the year there are many who would feel it their duty to pay it; that they could not afford to risk their lives, and those of their family for such an amount. Any one can get this insurance for 25 cents, that being the price of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. In almost every neighborhood some one has died from an attack of bowel complaint before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. One or two doses of this medicine will cure any ordinary case. It never falls. Can you afford to take the risk for so small an amount? For sale by H. F. Vortkamp, n. e. cor. Main and North streets.

Mothers will find Chamberlain's Cough Remedy especially valuable for croup and whooping cough. It will give prompt relief and is safe and pleasant. AMERICAN RAILROADS.

Report of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A COLLECTION OF STATISTICS.

Miles Built and in Operation—Consolidations—Number of Locomotives, Cars and Employes—Earnings, Dividends, Etc. Employes and Passengers Killed and Injured—Recommendations.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The seventh statistical report of the interstate commerce commission for the year ending June 30, 1894, has just been submitted.

In the introduction special attention is called to the peculiar conditions affecting the operation of railways during the year. First, the report covers the last four months of the Columbian exposition during which time there was an increased passenger traffic. Second, it covers a period of widespread and unprecedented business depression. Third, on June 30, 1894, 192 roads operating upwards of 42,000 miles of line and representing about one-fourth of the total railway capitalization, were in the hands of receivers. The effect of these conditions is apparent in nearly all the figures presented.

Mileage.

The total railway mileage in the United States on June 30, 1894, was 178,708, an increase during the year of 2,247 miles. The increase during the previous year was 4,897. The percentage of increase during 1894 was less than for any preceding year for which reports have been made to the commissioners, and it is not probable that the year ending June 30, 1895, will show much improvement. The number of roads abandoned was 16. The total mileage of all tracks was 233,533 miles.

The total number of railway corporations on June 30, 1894, was 1,924, an increase during the year of 22. The number of roads not in operation was 77. The movement of consolidation during the year on the basis of mileage involved has been greatest in four years previous. Fifteen roads, representing 1,734 miles, have been merged; 22 roads, representing 2,352 miles, have been reorganized, and 14 roads, representing 1,590 miles, have been consolidated.

Locomotives, Cars, Etc.

On June 30, 1894, the total number of locomotives was 35,492, an increase during the year of 704. The total number of cars reported was 1,278,078. The increase in the number of cars during the year was 4,132 as against an increase of 18,864 during the previous year. This falling off in the ratio of increase is due to the fact that the railways have during the year destroyed a large number of old, worn out cars. During the year 1,779 locomotives and 30,308 cars were fitted with train brakes, and 1,197 locomotives and 84,186 cars were fitted with automatic couplers. Seventy-four and eighty-one hundredths per cent of the total equipment is still without train brakes, and 72.77 per cent without automatic couplers.

The total number of railway employes on June 30, 1894, was 779,698, a decrease as compared with the number on June 30, 1893, of 93,994, or 10.76 per cent. This is a smaller number employed than in any years since 1890. This decrease is due, the report states, to the heavy falling off in traffic and the endeavor of the railways to economize.

A new feature in this report is a table giving a comparative statement of the average daily compensation of the various classes of railway employes for 1892, 1893 and 1894.

Capital Stock.

The amount of capital stock was $4,824,075,650, of which $1,103,584,166 was common stock and $720,491,493 was preferred stock. The funded debt was $5,356,383,019. The amount of current liabilities was $605,815,185. The amount of railway securities held by the railways as an investment was $1,544,085,547, an increase during the year of $18,968,563.

The amount of stock paying no dividend was $2,068,150,904, or 63.43 per cent of the total amount. The total amount of dividends was $95,575,976, or an average rate on the dividend paying stock of 5.41 per cent. The amount of bonds paying no interest was $650,873,789. The amount of miscellaneous obligations paying no interest was $53,424,264, and the amount of income bonds paying no interest was $210,757,554.

Passengers Carried.

The number of passengers carried was 619,688,199, an increase over the previous year of 26,127,587, and was occasioned by the world's fair travel.

There was a large decrease in freight traffic, the number of tons carried being 636,186,553, as against 745,119,482 in 1893, a decrease of 106,932,929 tons.

Earnings.

The gross earnings of the railways for the year were $1,073,361,797, a decrease as compared with the previous year of $147,390,077. Passenger revenues decreased $16,142,258, and the revenue from freight traffic decreased $120,562,948.

Operating Expenses.

The amount of operating expenses was $731,414,322, a decrease of $96,506,977. The largest per cent of decrease was in the operating expenses assigned to maintenance of way and structures and to maintenance of equipment, which show respectively a decrease of 15.12 and 17.72 per cent.

Net Earnings.

The net earnings were $341,947,475, a decrease of $50,883,100, as compared with the previous year. The increase derived from sources outside of operations was $142,816,805. The amount of fixed charges and other deductions from income was $429,008,310, leaving a net income of $55,755,970 available for dividends, and decrease as compared with the previous year of nearly 50 per cent.

Dividends.

The amount of dividends paid was $95,575,976, a decrease of only $5,353,909 from the amount paid the previous year. The fact that nearly the normal amount of dividends was paid, notwithstanding the great decrease in income available for them, and that the payment of the amount stated entailed a deficit from the operations of the year of $45,912,044, is noted. The revenue derived from the carrying of passengers was $285,349,558, and the revenue derived from freight traffic was $699,490,913.

Employes Killed and Injured.

During the year 1,823 railway employes were killed and 23,422 were injured, as compared with 2,727 killed and 31,729 injured in 1893. This marked decrease in casualties is part due, the report says, to the decrease in the number of men employed and the decrease in the volume of business handled. The increased use of automatic appliances in railway equipment also may have rendered railway employment less dangerous.

Passengers Killed and Injured.

The number of passengers killed was 324, an increase of 25, and the number injured was 5,031, a decrease of 195. To show the ratio of casualty it may be stated that one employe was killed out of every 428 in service and one injured out of every 33 employed.

Recommendations.

In concluding the report the statistician renews the recommendations made in previous reports in regard to the desirability of requiring annual reports from express companies, corporations, companies and persons owning rolling stock used in interstate commerce; corporations, companies and persons owning depot property, stockyards and elevators used by interstate carriers, and from carriers on water that compete with railways for traffic.

In Another Year.

Reference is also made to the question of requiring the railways to report freight earnings by commodities. On account of the present depressed financial condition of the railways it has been decided to let this matter rest another year, although there is no question as to the desirability of such reports.

DEFAULTER TAYLOR

Failed to Show Up at the Palmer House in Chicago Yesterday.

CHICAGO, June 17.—W. W. Taylor, ex-state treasurer of South Dakota, did not put in an appearance at the Palmer House yesterday as was expected. He was in the city, however, for a short time, although his whereabouts could not be ascertained. H. A. Taylor, of Lafayette, Ind., a brother, was at the Palmer. He said that his brother did not desire to be interviewed. He would not say where the brother was, but said that he would leave for South Dakota during the night. It was reported that Attorney General Crawford of Dakota was with Taylor.

Taylor left last night on the 6:10 o'clock Northwestern train for Pierre, S. D., where he will give himself up.

Later it was learned that Taylor did take quarters at the Palmer House, but under an assumed name to avoid annoyance. The ex-state treasurer denied interviews of all outsiders, and would not give the slightest information about his travels.

NEBRASKA CROPS

Are in Better Condition Now Than They've Been For Years.

OMAHA, June 17.—Nebraska crops are in better condition than they have been for years. The indications are that the corn yield of the state will be something enormous. It is 80 per cent of the entire crop of the state. Much of the corn was planted late within the present month, yet it is already sprouted and flourishing. The small grain will be a full crop.

Foul Play Feared.

MIDDLETOWN, O., June 17.—Charles Bogen and Lewis King have long been near and intimate neighbors at Amanda, a little village south of this place. They have both disappeared. Their wives fear foul play, as the men had considerable money.

Killed by Cars.

TOLEDO, June 17.—Curtis Downs, a prominent horse dealer of Wauseon, O., was killed by the cars near this city. He was on his way east with a carload of horses, and in some unknown manner was thrown from the train.

Gas Well on Fire.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., June 17.—The Big Moses gas well near Sistersville, W. Va., was struck by lightning and the gas set on fire. The flame is several hundred feet high and can not be controlled.

Mrs. Cleveland's Collection of Letters.

In the matter of letters from people of prominence all over the United States Mrs. Cleveland has about as valuable a collection as is to be found. Probably after the close of the present administration Mrs. Cleveland will carry into execution long cherished plans and have all these letters compiled into a series of volumes. Many of the letters date back to when it first came to be whispered that she was to wed the president. Then there are the letters received with the wedding presents, that of themselves make a valued collection of autographs. Some idea of the extent to which a personal correspondence can accumulate in this respect is told by Mrs. Cleveland in regard to her experience during the years of the first Cleveland administration. Those of the letters received that were of purely personal character from her friends were always kept, until finally six immense Saratoga trunks were filled. When preparations for the removal of the president and his wife to New York were started, Mrs. Cleveland found a task that could not be delegated to any clerk or maid. It took a week, and when the task was completed the lot had been reduced to one trunkful.—Chicago Tribune.

Mr. James Perdue, an old soldier residing at Monroe, Mich., was severely afflicted with rheumatism but received prompt relief from pain by using Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says: "At times my back would ache so badly that I could hardly raise up. If I had not gotten relief I would not be here to write these few lines. Chamberlain's Pain Balm has done me a great deal of good and I feel very thankful for it." For sale by H. F. Vortkamp, n. e. cor. Main and North streets.

The Des Moines Election.

Women voted in good numbers at the recent school elections in several districts of Des Moines. The News of that city says:

"North Des Moines women came to the front in great style. The polling place was the most interesting of any such place in Des Moines in years. There was no smoking in the room and flags and bunting decorations made the occasion seem the more patriotic. The vote was a very large one. In 1893 only 48 votes were cast at the school election and only 85 in 1894, but Monday the total was 593, of which ballots 121 were placed in the box by women."

It must be borne in mind that the women could vote only on the question of issuing bonds to build new schoolhouses, while the men voted not only on bonds, but for school directors.

THE "DEVIL'S MOOSE."

A Gigantic Flesh Eating Plant That Is Found In Nicaragua.

Carnivorous plants are certainly among the curiosities of the vegetable world. The poetical and religious Linnæus, who had occasion to study the fly catching peony, found, in his astonishment, no other name to bestow upon it than this—Miraculum naturæ (prodigy of nature). Since the illustrious Swedish botanist, the mechanism of carnivorous plants has been well studied, and particularly by Darwin, who has devoted to these plants a remarkable work. They are usually of small dimensions, and do not attain the size of one described in the "Bolletino del Naturalisti."

M. Fabiano Carlo tells there of a gigantic carnivorous plant that has been discovered on the shores of Lake Nicaragua by a naturalist named Dunstan. He discovered this curious plant in the following manner: Traveling with his dog, he heard the animal give vent to cries of pain. He advanced and found his dog held by three black, sticky bands, under which the skin was chafed till it bled. These bands were the branches of a new carnivorous plant, which Dunstan calls the "land octopus." The branches are flexible, polished, black, without leaves, secreting a viscous fluid and furnished with a great number of suckers by which they attach themselves to their victims. It might almost be believed to be an octopus transformed into a plant.

To extricate his dog Dunstan tried to cut the branches, and succeeded, though not without difficulty, and after having his hands severely injured by the tentacles of the "land octopus." As may be realized, observations under these conditions were not convenient to make, and the naturalist was able to get few facts concerning this odd plant. He proved the presence of numerous suckers, and found that the fetid odor of the black sticky fluid that covers the branches serves to attract prey to the plant. He also was able to note similarity of character with other carnivorous plants. For instance, the "land octopus" abandons its prey after having sucked out the nutritive elements. The natives of Central America call this singular plant by the appropriate name of "the devil's noose."—Paris Cosmos.

At last a monument will be erected as a memorial of something worth while. It will stand for generations to come in remembrance of the dispenser of a great blessing, a benefactor of mankind in the past, present and in time to come. More people have risen up and blessed this benefactor than have blessed even the name of Morse, inventor of the telegraph. The name of the benefactor is as familiar to the American people as the name of George Washington is. The benefactor whose memory is thus to be honored is the Baldwin apple. The monument will be set up on the very spot in Woburn, Mass., where the original Baldwin apple tree grew.

Unless foreign correspondents falsify, which they generally do, H. R. H. is coming to visit the United States and attend the yacht races in September. He will be the guest, so it is said, of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Goelet in their ducal palace at Newport, which again, "it is said," is being fitted up with even more than ducal magnificence for the occasion. The distinguished guest comes on condition that no royal fuss be made over him. H. R. H. is honorable, sensible and tactful as always. If he does come, it cannot fail to make stronger and more lasting the good understanding between the two great English speaking nations of the world. Furthermore, when he has been among us after an absence of 35 years and has found out what good times a rich citizen of the United States has, how he will wish he was not H. R. H., after all, but just a plain American millionaire.

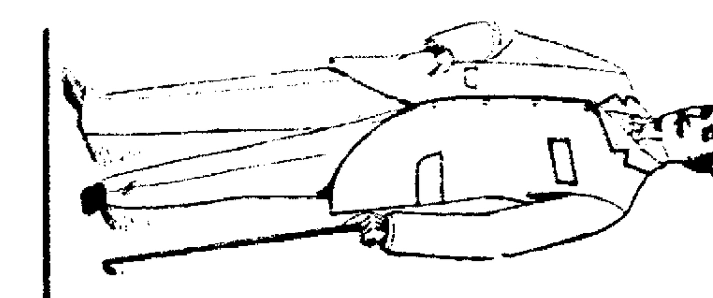

One more picture is to be added to the portrait gallery of presidents in the White House, that of ex-President Harrison. By and by our presidential portraits will be as numerous as those in the hall of the kings of Scotland at Holyrood palace. But let us hope that they will never be as ugly. The downright honest ugliness of the pictured countenances of the ancient kings of Scotland is nowhere equaled on this globe. The nearest approach to it is to be seen in the counterfeit presentments of the ancient worthies and dignitaries of Boston in Harvard Memorial hall.

Calomel.

Calomel was discovered by Crollius in the seventeenth century, and the first directions for its preparation were given by Beguin in 1608. Its name is derived from two Greek words, signifying "a beautiful black," because in its preparation a black powder is the first step in the manufacture, being produced by rubbing mercury together with corrosive sublimate.

ST. ROSE'S PAROCHIAL SCHOOL.

An Excellent Display of School Work Made the Pupils of this Educational Institution.

Accepting a cordial invitation which had been extended to him, a representative of the TIMES-DEMOCRAT spent yesterday afternoon in viewing the school work which is now on exhibition in the various grades of St. Rose's Catholic school of this city. What he saw there was both a delight and a surprise to him. From the kindergarten to the 10th grade everything that met his eye in the various rooms breathed the fragrance of studious application, of artistic finish and refinement, of education, thoroughness and unyielding patience. Neatness and uniformity went hand in hand with practical work in every branch of knowledge which had been taught there. In the kindergarten, that especial pet of our "end of the century" pedagogues, he saw specimens of penmanship, clay moulding, needle work and drawing by little tots who are scarcely able to bable their own name, that made him pause in actual astonishment. There was not a paper in the room which looked as if it had been elaborated or "fixed up" for any special occasion, and yet he could not detect a single erasure or blot, or could see scarcely one speck of dirt on any one of them. Indeed this is true not only of the primary department, where if in any place it would be excusable, but of every room of the school. The second and third grades consisted mostly of penmanship, drawing and answers to questions in Christian doctrine. In the room occupied by the fourth grade, which is frequented by children of about nine and ten years, were several papers of copied music, 50 or 60 hand drawn maps, in which the rules of latitude and longitude were well observed, and he noticed in particular a county map of the Buckeye State, a map of Allen county, a product map of the United States and scores of papers on language lessons, arithmetic, penmanship, drawing and Christian doctrine.

The walls of the room of the fifth and sixth grades were almost covered with specimens of the pupils' work in grammar, arithmetic, map-drawing, Bible history and various kinds of maps. As the TIMES-DEMOCRAT representative sat in this room jotting down a few notes about it, his seat was soon surrounded by a pretty bouquet of the brightest little girls that ever gave information to a newspaper man. But they did not come uninvited, as he had asked them to tell him a few things about the work pursued in their grade. It would be impossible for the reporter to tell what part of the exhibition made the best showing. There was a multitude of papers, all neatly and elegantly done.

Each department furnished its proportion of the work, and the TIMES-DEMOCRAT congratulates the superintendent, pupils and teachers on the splendid exhibition they have made.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Convention of Lima District Held at Wapakoneta.

The convention opened on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock in the M. E. church, but this proved to be too small to seat the congregation. The services during the remainder of the time were held in the opera house.

Each League in the district was represented by one or more delegates, Grace, Lima, sending, perhaps, the largest representation.

All were cordially welcomed by the Koneta Chapter and their friends and we returned to our homes feeling that the people of Wapakoneta are among the best entertainers that can be found.

The programme for this convention was arranged by Rev. W. H. Leatherman, Wapakoneta, president of the district, and was builded from a thought expressed by John Wesley —"I desire a League offensive and defensive with every soldier of Jesus Christ."

This was divided into topics chosen for each service. The topics were sub-divided into subjects which had been assigned to delegates. The addresses all showed a thorough study and were well delivered to their audience, who felt much benefitted for having heard them.

We had with us Saulubro Toyama, a Japanese, who has been attending school and will graduate in Delaware this year, and later will return to his own country as a missionary. By giving lectures during his vacations he has educated himself and is now aiding another with his education.

The business of the convention was transacted Friday afternoon, at which time Rev. J. H. Fitzwater, presiding elder, and Rev. S. Baumgardner, Grace, Lima, were elected delegates from this district to attend the International Epworth League convention at Chattanooga, June 27 to 30, 1895.

Rev J. W. Hodge, Alleutown, and Ella Peltier, Delphos, were elected delegates to attend the convention at Dayton.

The following important resolutions were proposed by the committee on resolutions and unanimously adopted by the convention:

Resolved, That we will not attend Sunday excursions and will use our influence against them.

Resolved, That we are in favor of the Haskell bill and that we will do all that is in our power for it.

Greetings were received from Rev. B. H. McCoy, first vice-president of the district, who could not be present; Toledo and Bellefontaine districts. A response from the convention was sent to each.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President, Rev. W. H. Leatherman, Wapakoneta; first vice-president, Ella Peltier, Delphos; second vice-president, Marita Hilworth, Celina; third vice-president, W. L. Rogers, New Hampshire; fourth vice-president, Bertha Nutt, Grace, Lima: recording secretary, W. H. Lowery, Elida; corresponding secretary, Rev. Wm Hook, Rockford; superintendent Junior League, Mayme Foster, Van Wert; superintendent Epworth League Guards, Rev. Jos M. Arann, Van Wert: executive committee—Rev. J. H. Fitzwater, Mrs. Newcomb, Van Wert, and Rev. F. S. Robinson, West Cairo.

Rev. S. Baumgardner, on behalf of the League of Grace, Lima, invited the convention, which will be held one year from this time, to convene at Grace, and asked that it should be a mass convention, which will bring to our homes from six to eight hundred Epworthians. The invitation was unanimously accepted

The music was furnished by the league choir of Koneta Chapter, accompanied by the piano, violin and cornet. We were also favored with solos, duets and quartets from the Epworth quartet, Vaughnsville, John F. Griffiths, Fred L. Butler, Rev. F. S. Robinson and Chas E. Griffiths.

We returned to our respective leagues with a new zeal and earnestness—a new inspiration to do more and better work for the Master during the coming year, that we may come to our next convention bringing our sheaves with us.

NO OTHER FIRM EVER DID OR EVER WILL SELL PERFECT GOODS AT AS LOW PRICES AS THE UNION.

LET US REASON TOGETHER.

You know that two and two are four. It is just as evident that a $3 00 Child's Suit sold for 95 cents means either a loss to the merchant who sells it—which is not likely—or it means that under ordinary circumstances, these merchants are overcharging you. But such, and similar announcements are made almost daily by some of our unscrupulous competitors, and what is more, the goods they offer are old enough to vote, and bought at olden time high prices Now the question is, are they losing money? Hardly. Are their goods damaged? You would soon discover this: or have they been overcharging you right along.

LET US REASON TOGETHER.

We do not wish to pose as "public benefactors" or "distributing angels," for we are in business for business. But every article in our store is brand new, bought at the prevailing low prices, and we make it a special object to sell cheaply, because we want your trade Our business during the nine months of "The Union's" existence has been great. We want to make it greater, and our methods are being appreciated. What we tell you in print, we can substantiate by facts, and our present clearance sale—fifth week, this—is demonstrating it. REASON—LOOK OVER THE SHELF-WORN GOODS OUR COMPETITORS HAVE BEEN CHEATING YOU WITH FOR YEARS, then come to us, and if our prices are not lower, our goods better and prettier—such a pleasant odor of newness—than those you see elsewhere, we shall gladly forfeit your future patronage.

TUGBOAT CHILDS SAILS

Under Foreign Registry—Can Now Do as She Pleases.

PHILADELPHIA, June 17.—The mysterious mission of the Philadelphia tugboat George Childs has assumed an entirely new aspect and unless the steamer is actually engaged in filibustering tactics, she is beyond the pale of legal interference by the United States government. The theory obtained here that the Childs' voyage to Jamaica was for the purpose of towing insurgent transports and assisting the rebellious factions in the landing of troops.

The statement of Deputy Collector Crilley that before clearing the George W. Childs was placed under foreign registry completely alters the responsibility of her owners and crew. Mr. Crilley said that before taking out his clearance papers Captain Swain had applied for and secured a foreign register, at the same time releasing his coastwise register with which the tugboat was supplied.

MURDER AT A CHURCH FESTIVAL.

Man Shot Through the Heart and a Woman Seriously Injured.

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., June 17.—At a country church festival Saturday night there was a fight. Creed Harvey, a well-known citizen, was shot through the heart, dying instantly. Mrs. Amy Lunsford was seriously injured by being struck on the head with a stone. Jack Ward and Rhoda Perdue, the murderers, leaped through the window and escaped to the woods. A large posse is now scouring the country for them.

Turned His Hair White.

DULUTH, June 17.—After hanging two days to a pile in the lake which projected a few inches above the water, Charles McCabe, a young lumberman of this city, whose boat had capsized, was rescued almost dead by two fishermen. He had buttoned his coat around the pile and thus saved his life. The fright had turned his hair almost white.

Saved by the Rain.

TOPEKA, June 17.—The recent rains in Kansas have saved many acres of wheat that it was feared would prove worthless. Advices received at the office of the General Superintendent of the Rock Island road at Topeka lead Chief Clerk Pier to estimate the wheat crop of Kansas at 22,000,000 bushels.

Claims Self Defense.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., June 17.—At Johnson station on the Kentucky and South Atlantic railroad James Whitaker met Newt Anderson on the road and put five bullets in Anderson's body, killing him instantly. Whitaker gave himself up. He says Anderson has repeatedly threatened his life.

Town Sinking.

HAZLETON, Pa., June 17.—The town of Audenried is slowly sinking, owing to the collapse of the pillars in the Beaver Brook mine, over which it is built. Several buildings have been wrecked. The people are moving to safe places.

Will Be No Strike.

WASHINGTON, June 17.—The trouble between Foreman Espey and the bookbinders of the government printing office has been amicably settled and the threatened strike averted. Public Printer Benedict had no hand in the negotiations.

Boys Fight Fatally.

LEXINGTON, Ky., June 17.—Lewis White, 17, was probably fatally shot by Fortney Hudson, 19, during a fight, in which half a dozen lads participated. The ball entered the forehead and lodged in the brain.

Used His Revolver.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., June 17.—At Winifrede, just above here, Alex Mitchell shot and fatally wounded Frank King. The trouble arose over some remarks Mitchell is said to have made about King's sister.

Will Close Down.

ELWOOD, Ind., June 17.—The Macbeth lamp chimney factory, the Elwood glass house and the bottle plant will close down June 29, throwing 500 persons out of work for two months.

Miners Killed.

SHELBURN, Ind., June 17.—James City, 17, and Michael Cryne, 19, both miners at Jackson Hill, were caught by falling slate and instantly killed.

Attempted Assassination.

MOUNT STERLING, Ky., June 17.—An unknown assassin emptied a shotgun at Councilman Henry C. Watson at night, but missed him.

FRUITS AND FLOWERS

HYBRID CANNAS

These Popular Plants Are Cheap and Very Easy to Cultivate.

Not many years ago, when only the old species and varieties, such as Indica flaccida, robusta, brunnigsii, etc., were to be met with, very little interest was aroused; they were grown chiefly as subtropicals for their foliage effect. With the introduction of Mme. Crozy, a new era began and a new type of hybrids was created, which was found to suit admirably our hot summers and produce large and beautiful spikes of bloom when other plants were burned out, or partially so. Its success as a bedding plant was assured, and the propagation increased a millionfold.

Until recently the French growers had been looked to for new varieties, hence the name "French Cannas." The tables are now turned, and seedlings of merit are produced at home with such rapidity that there is danger of a perfect inundation of names, which eventually may be very confusing. It has been repeated over and over again that Mme. Crozy would never be beaten, that no seedlings would ever come up to its standard. But, according to American Gardening, that argument no longer holds good, the American seedling Columbia taking that place, ranking now as perhaps the most perfect flower introduced. The color, very rich crimson, with a most beautiful tone, is backed up by the tallest and best balanced flower yet found in cannas, forming the most compact and symmetrical spike, the foliage being equally stocky, distinct and compact.

Another American canna, which promises to be the finest scarlet flower ever yet offered, is the F. R. Pierson. The trusses are of immense size. Mrs. Fairman Rogers is still another American canna said to rival the Crozy, with larger flowers and rounder truss. The Eldorado, a French canna, will possibly rank as the best yellow canna up to date.

The canna delights in good, rich soil and plenty of it, abundant sunshine and copious waterings. It multiplies readily at the roots, which in the fall are divided and can be stored away in a dry cellar or on shelves, or under benches in the greenhouse.

One Way to Plant a Lawn.

This is a method for planting a lawn recommended by a Connecticut correspondent: Get the kind of grass desired, and break it up into small rooted pieces, plant with a trowel about six inches or so apart, and then roll the whole smoothly. Kentucky blue grass, set out in this way, would meet each center before midsummer, and make a nice, even lawn before then. Aside from this, one must either sod the whole of it or sow grass seed.

Good Plants For Vases.

For veranda and lawn vases the following will be found desirable plants: Dracænas terminalis, indivisa, australis, ensifolia; Geranium's Pierre Crozy, Souvenir de Charles Turner and Jeanne d'Arc; Mesembryanthemums, Vinca major var., centauria, gazania; tradescantias, begonias, phrynium, cannas, lobelias, aspidistras, agaves, pilea, cupheas, phœnix and latanias.

A New and Beautiful Rose.

The rose Belle Siebrecht is one of the sensation plant varieties of the year. It is a seedling of La France, crossed with Lady Mary Fitzwilliam. It was raised in England some years ago under another name, its present one having been given since it was brought to this country. It is on sale this season for the first time. The flowers are fine, large, full, long in the bud, glowing rich pink and powerfully fragrant, retaining their form and fragrance to a remarkable degree. The stems are stout and leathery. Thanks are due to Gardening for this illustrated description.

NEW ROSE BELLE SIEBRECHT.

Fruit Notes.

The Delaware legislature has appointed a commission to visit all peach orchards in the state and destroy all trees affected by the yellows.

What the Bartlett is among pears and the Concord among grapes, the Baldwin is among apples—especially in the north. In the south and southwest it does not succeed so well.

Five times as much fruit of first class quality was yielded by Seckel pear trees at the New York station that were sprayed twice after blossoming as by the unsprayed. The bordeaux mixture was used to prevent pear scab.

Varieties of strawberries that are neither very early nor very late in point of maturity are the most productive and have the longest fruiting season.

Currants are propagated from cuttings by cutting last year's wood to six or eight inch twigs and planting in moist, rich loam. Transplant after one or two years. Currant cuttings do better taken in August than in spring, according to American Agriculturist.

KARL AND TARPUS.

Karl knelt down and took steady aim. Then came a flash and a report, and almost simultaneously with the rebound of his immense rifle the huge, crouching lioness, the black lioness, hurled herself upon him. He was borne down as if by an avalanche.

He had missed. Why? For this reason: As he aimed between her eyes out of them flashed a strange, strange light that quivered the core of his being; a light that unnerved his hand and withered his desire to kill.

And it smote him not with fear—for Karl had slain many lions, and his nerves were as steel—but it smote him with sudden, overwhelming remorse.

Thus he, the mighty hunter, was shaken and made to send his bullet flying wide.

And he lay in the grip of death.

Though he felt that his end had come, he had that clearness and poise of mind which come in supreme moments.

The noisome breath of the lioness burned his face as he lay crushed into the sand by her weight. He was waiting, with eyes closed, for the beginning of the end, that hideous beginning, but a calm was in his soul, a strange calm. He felt at rest, at peace.

There was a pause. Suddenly the lion snarled, and Karl opened his eyes.

Ah, again that weird, reproaching light! It streamed from the glaring, yellow eyes. Into their depths he gazed and gazed till his mind partly left him. No more he thought of death.

And now the eyes became a piercing blaze of light, which grew and grew till Karl saw before him a broad, shining space.

In the distance flashed a scene. And the soul of the hunter flew toward it.

This was the scene:

Humans filled a vast amphitheater. They shook it shouting. Fearsome was this shouting, even as the howl of a myriad pack of wolves. On the faces was the look of glee—that glee indescribable—that comes when the passion for blood spilling fills the soul.

This passion was upon all—all, from emperor to slave. Man was transformed to a human wolf. The wish to kill or see killed linked, bound all.

The impulse of Cain made all akin.

It was a feast day to the gods in Rome, and a mighty, yelling multitude had gathered together to do them homage by seeing a man fight with and kill a man, by seeing a man wait for the signal that might bid him drive his gladius into the heart of a beloved comrade, by seeing a man fight with a beast. Their gods were honored by the flowing and flying of blood. Huge, huge sport to watch it! And yonder Nero sat, swathed in purple. His eyes gleamed as he witnessed the glorious sport.

Prolonged was the shouting, because Tarpus, a favorite gladiator, had just killed, in single combat, with the gladius, his third man. He was now about to fight yonder Numidian lioness. She was striving to burst the bars of her cage, for she had been without food for three days.

A fine fellow was Tarpus, with waving, yellow hair that hung afar down his back. Frank was his face, bold was the glance of his blue eye, and he was great of stature.

And Karl was Tarpus.

"Curse the Roman cowards!" the gladiator muttered as he waited, heedless and resentful of the ovation he was receiving, for the black lioness to be let forth into the arena. "Oh, to think that I obeyed their cruel mandate that bade me slay my comrade, Davoro—Davoro, who risked his life for mine in the campaign! But he smiled in my face, as I bent over him, and said, 'Strike deep, my Tarpus, if thou lovest me!' and I drove the full of my blade through his heart. Oh, I, of all men—I, who loved him, thus to have slain him! Oh, the fight—the fight—it is with me yet! Davoro, who was bound to me by ties oft closer than the ties of blood, stands before me, his gladius in hand. We cross blades, but our eyes meet not, and lo! before I know aught, he is lying on the sand beneath me, while I stand o'er him with uplifted blade. Then I look up to yonder sea of coward faces, and see thumbs which point downward. Aye, around and around I look, but from all sides the vile gestures come, crowding, overwhelming my soul. They bid me to slay. And then Davoro's voice rings in my ear, as he lies prostrate, bidding me to falter not, but kill him swiftly. Oh!" And the face of Tarpus was softened and sad as he looked across the blood reddened sand of the arena to the place where his comrade lay in death.

Grand was the face of Tarpus—like to the face of a Norse god.

And he thought of his home far, far away—his home from which he was torn, long years ago, from a loved one and little ones, and carried to this great city to be made a slave; to be made to fight out his heart's blood for the amusement of the brutal Romans! Visions of outstretched hands and loving, sorrowful faces came to him from across far, wild seas. The arena, with its blood lust, its pitilessness, was forgotten in a flood of old, tender memories.

Suddenly he looked up at the shouting Romans. Scorn was in his face. They looked upon him but as a human fighting beast, and he wished fiercely that he could kill them all with one thrust from his blade. His heart hardened. He felt that he was indeed alone. He [illegible] and fell upon the black [illegible] the [illegible] blade of the gladius and waited. No [illegible] a mighty [illegible] from the cage [into] the center of the arena. The door had been suddenly flung open.

She paused, turning her head and sniffing the air. Tarpus walked straight toward her. Suddenly she noticed him, and she bounded, roaring, almost to his side. She crouched for a final spring, and Tarpus, sinking on one knee, and with gladius ready, prepared to fight to the death. The vast crowd was hushed awaiting breathlessly the instant when the brute and the man would meet in the death struggle.

But here occurred a thing inexplicable.

As the eyes of the lioness and the man met both paused suddenly and remained as if transfixed, the man kneeling, the lioness crouching.

What had happened? Why did she not obey the prompting of her instinct to rend him asunder? Did some subtle, sudden power stay her? What spell was working? What was the bond that bound this man and beast? Could it be that they were kindred souls, who were once together, and who recognized each other? Who could tell?

But whatever the spell or bond it had a strange effect upon Tarpus, for he, with a look in his face indescribable, stood upright, and laying his hand upon the lioness walked over with her to the place where Nero sat and insulted and reviled him. Then he became frenzied, and called loudly for the Romans to come and kill him—the lioness roaring the while.

All were amazed and terrified. Surely a weird, nameless happening! Their hearts were cold with fear.

And archers were ordered out.

They killed the gladiator and the lioness with their arrows.

Philadelphia's Ancient Lockup.

An old English dungeon has been brought to light by the tearing down of a building in the rear of a pickle factory on Spruce street, below Second. The building is thought to have been more than 300 years old. Every brick in it was brought from England, and the building was once the pride of the little colony that lived here. It was originally, it is said, the courthouse of the settlement, and underneath the ground were those dungeons or cells in which prisoners were kept. It is supposed that the cells were used as temporary places of confinement, and not for prisoners serving long terms, much the same as the "lockups" or station houses of today. The bricks are as solid as in the days of old and will be used again in another building. The old house has been burned out several times, but the walls were never damaged much. The whole neighborhood is an interesting one. The building adjoining the one torn down has a fourth floor, which is windowless. Instead of the usual windows it has portholes, slanting downward, from which, "in days of old, when knights were bold," men probably picked off prowling Indians or enemies of some kind.—Philadelphia Press.

Sterne's Plagiarisms.

The following instance of Sterne's unblushing "conveying" has not, I think, been hitherto recorded. In "Tristram Shandy," volume 1, chapter 12, is the following well known passage:

"When to gratify a private appetite, it is once resolved upon that an innocent and a helpless creature shall be sacrificed, 'tis an easy matter to pick up sticks enough from any thicket where it has strayed to make a fire to offer it up with."

In the introduction to "Baconiana," London, 1679, T. T.—i. e., Dr. Thomas Tenison, in comment on Bacon's words to King James, "I wish that as I am the first, so I may be the last of sacrifices in your times," writes as follows (page 16):

"And when from private Appetite, it is resolv'd that a Creature shall be sacrificed; it is easie to pick up sticks enough, from any Thicket whither it hath straied, to make a Fire to offer it with."

There could not be a more audacious example of literary theft.—Notes and Queries.

Pronunciation of "Bicycle."

The constantly growing bicycle fad calls attention to the large number of cases of mispronunciation of the word "bicycle." There is a certain class of people, particularly New York's fashionable set, which insists upon giving the "y" a long sound, as in "cycle," forgetting that a prefix or suffix often changes the sound of the vowel "y." Still others go to the other extreme and give the "y" the sound of "ee," but the best usage makes the "y" short and pronounces the word "bi-sik-l." But even among those who give the "y" the short sound there is a disposition to place the accent on the second syllable instead of on the first, where it belongs. When a word comes into such common use as "bicycle," it is well to learn to pronounce it correctly.—Troy Times.

Holmes as the Autocrat.

Colonel Higginson said recently in an address in Cambridge on Dr. Holmes that, although it was commonly supposed "The Autocrat" was a success from the outset, yet in his opinion its fate was evenly balanced for a month or two. Mr. Underwood, who was then assistant editor of The Atlantic and had a large share in its conduct, thought that the work would be either a great success or a great failure and consulted Colonel Higginson with some anxiety. He feared that Dr. Holmes' outspoken sayings might be looked upon as conceited. But the matter was not long left in doubt.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

FOR LITTLE FOLKS.

LEARNED A LESSON.

The Boy With the Umbrella No Longer Wanted to Be a Big General.

In the middle of the garden stood a little boy under a big umbrella. He always kept it spread, no matter what the weather might be, and winter and summer, day and night, he was always in his place. A fountain fell on the top of the umbrella, which was iron, and all around the boy, who was iron too.

"Oh, dear," thought the boy, "how I hate to carry this old umbrella! I wish I was the stone general over there in the park, and then I could always ride on horseback.

"Then, instead of this ridiculous old thing, I should have a great long sword in my hand, and I'd hold it right over the people's heads, as if I was going to fight them all!" You see, he was a boy, although only an iron one.

Meanwhile the air in the garden was growing more and more sultry, but he did not feel it in the middle of the cool fountain. The people in the hot, dusty street looked longingly at the iron boy in his snug little water house. How they wished that they could change places with him!

At last a great drop fell, and then another, and then it seemed as if some one was pumping water out of the clouds. Everybody rushed home as fast as possible. A little schoolboy ran past and looked up at the iron boy.

"Wish I was that fellow!" he shouted. "Hullo, lend us your parasol?" But the iron boy only stood still and sulked.

"Oh, may I come under your umbrella?" gasped a butterfly, who was caught in her new spring dress. "How wise you are always to carry one!" She sat on his finger and dried her blue and gold suit. The rain fell in torrents all around them, but it did not touch her.

At last the sun came out again and made a great rainbow in the sky and a little bow in the fountain. The butterfly said that she must go.

"You have saved my life, you kind boy!" she said gratefully. "This dreadful storm would have quite washed away poor little me.

"How much nicer to hold an umbrella over such a helpless little thing than to flourish a sword like that big stone doll yonder!" And waving her pretty wing to him away she flew.

"Perhaps she is right," thought the iron boy. And he held the despised umbrella straight and high as if he was proud of it, after all.—Youth's Companion.

Get an Egg and Spin It.

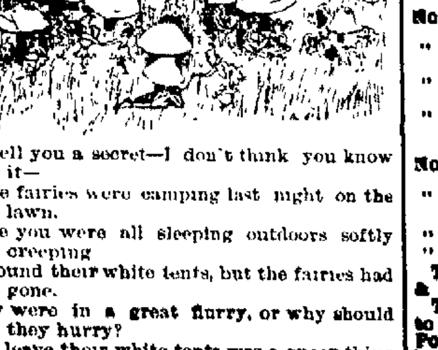

In fact, get two eggs, one boiled and the other raw, and spin them rapidly on their sides on a mirror or other perfectly smooth surface. If you put the palm of your hand gently upon the boiled egg while it is spinning, it of course ceases to move, and remains motionless after you have lifted your hand.

But if you do the same with a raw egg it will immediately begin to spin again when the hand is removed. Indeed, it is extraordinary how long you can hold your hand upon it without destroying its motion.

The reason of this is no doubt apparent. The fluid within the shell continues to revolve, though the shell is stationary, while in the other case the whole egg is stopped.

If you attempt to spin the egg on the mirror like a top, you will find that the boiled egg will spin for a considerable time, but the other will fall almost immediately on its side.—Pearson's Weekly.

The Fairies Were Camping.

I'll tell you a secret—I don't think you know it—
The fairies were camping last night on the lawn.
While you were all sleeping outdoors softly creeping
I found their white tents, but the fairies had gone.
They were in a great flurry, or why should they hurry?
To leave their white tents was a queer thing to do.
Maybe they come only at night when 'tis lonely.
I guess they are sly gypsy fairies, don't you?

THREE SHIPS.

Three ships there be a sailing
Betwixt the sea and sky,
And one is Now, and one is Then,
And one is By and by.

The first little ship is all for you,
Its masts are gold, its sails are blue,
And this is the cargo it brings:
Joyful days with sunlight glowing,
Nights where dreams like stars are growing,
Take them, sweet, or they'll be going,
For they every one have wings.

The second ship is all for me
A-sailing on a misty sea
And out across the twilight gray.
What it brought of gift and blessing
Would not stay for my caressing,
Was too dear for my possessing,
So it sails and sails away.

The last ship, riding fair and high
Upon the sea, is By-and-by.
O wind, be kind and gently blow!
Not too swiftly hasten hither,
When she turns, sweet, you'll go with her,
Sailing, floating hither, thither,
To what port I may not know.
—Harriet F. Blodgett in St. Nicholas.

A STRANGE CASE.

The transitory mental aberration of Sidney Davidson, remarkable enough in itself, is still more remarkable if Wade's explanation is to be credited. It sets one dreaming of the oddest possibilities of intercommunication in the future, of spending an intercalary five minutes on the other side of the world or being watched in our most secret operations by unsuspected eyes. It happened that I was the immediate witness of Davidson's seizure, and so it falls naturally to me to put the story upon paper.

When I say that I was the immediate witness of his seizure, I mean that I was the first on the scene. The thing happened at the Technical college in Gower street. He was alone in the larger laboratory when the thing happened. I was in the smaller room, where the balances are, writing up some notes. The thunderstorm had completely upset my work, of course. It was just after one of the louder peals that I thought I heard some glass smash in the other room. I stopped writing and turned round to listen. For a moment I heard nothing; the hail was playing the devil's tattoo on the corrugated zinc of the roof. Then came another sound, a smash—no doubt of it this time. Something heavy had been knocked off the bench. I jumped up at once and went and opened the door leading into the big laboratory.

I was surprised to hear a queer sort of laugh and saw Davidson standing unsteadily in the middle of the room, with a dazed look on his face. My first impression was that he was drunk. He did not notice me. He was clawing out at something invisible a yard in front of his face. He put out his hand slowly, rather hesitatingly, and then clutched nothing. "What's come to it?" he said. He held up his hands to his face, fingers spread out. "Great Scott!" he said. The thing happened three or four years ago, when every one swore by that personage. Then he began raising his feet clumsily, as though he had expected to find them glued to the floor.

"Davidson!" cried I. "What's the matter with you?" He turned round in my direction and looked about for me. He looked over me and at me and on either side of me without the slightest sign of seeing me. "Waves," he said, "and a remarkably neat schooner. I'd swear that was Bellows' voice. Hullo!" he shouted suddenly at the top of his voice.

I thought he was up to some foolery. Then I saw littered about his feet the shattered remains of the best of our electrometers. "What's up, man?" said I. "You've smashed the electrometer!"

"Bellows again!" said he. "Friends left, if my hands are gone. Something about electrometers. Which way are you, Bellows?" He suddenly came staggering toward me. "The d——d stuff cuts like butter," he said. He walked straight into the bench and recoiled. "None so buttery that!" he said, and stood swaying.

I felt scared. "Davidson," said I, "what on earth's come over you?"

He looked round him in every direction. "I could swear that was Bellows. Why don't you show yourself like a man, Bellows?"

It occurred to me that he must be suddenly struck blind. I walked round the table and laid my hand upon his arm. I never saw a man more startled in my life. He jumped away from me and came round into an attitude of self defense, his face fairly distorted with terror. "Good God!" he cried. "What was that?"

"It's I—Bellows. Confound it, Davidson!"

He jumped when I answered him and stared—how can I express it?—right through me. He began talking, not to me, but to himself. "Here in broad daylight on a clear beach. Not a place to hide in." He looked about him wildly. "Here! I'm off." He suddenly turned and ran headlong into the big electro magnet—so violently that, as we found afterward, he bruised his shoulder and jawbone cruelly. At that he stepped back a pace, and cried out with almost a whimper, "What in heaven's name has come over me?" He stood, blanched with terror and trembling violently, with his right arm clutching his left, where that had collided with the magnet.

By that time I was fairly scared and excited. "Davidson," said I, "don't be afraid."

He was startled at my voice, but not so excessively as before. I repeated my words in as clear and firm a tone as I could assume. "Bellows," he said, "is that you?"

"Can't you see it's me?"

He laughed. "I can't even see it's myself. Where the devil are we?"

"Here," said I, "in the laboratory."

"The laboratory!" he answered in a puzzled tone, and put his hand to his forehead. "I was in the laboratory—till that flash came, but I'm hanged if I'm there now. What ship is that?"

"There's no ship," said I. "Do be sensible, old chap."

"No ship!" he repeated, and seemed to forget my denial forthwith. "I suppose," said he slowly, "we're both dead. But the rummy part is I feel just as though I still had a body. Don't get used to it all at once, I suppose. The old shop was struck by lightning, I suppose. Jolly quick thing, Bellows—eh?"

"Don't talk nonsense. You're very much alive. You are in the laboratory blundering about. You've just smashed a new electrometer. I don't envy you when Boyce arrives."

He started away from me toward the diagrams of cryohydrates. "I must be deaf," said he. "They've fired a gun, for there goes the puff of smoke, and I never heard a sound."

I put my hand on his arm again, and this time he was less alarmed. "We seem to have a sort of invisible bodies," said he. "By Jove! There's a boat coming round the headland! It's very much like the old life, after all—in a different climate."

I shook his arm. "Davidson," I cried, "wake up!"

It was just then that Boyce came in. So soon as he spoke Davidson exclaimed: "Old Boyce! Dead too! What a lark!" I hastened to explain that Davidson was in a kind of somnambulistic trance. Boyce was interested at once. We both did all we could to rouse the fellow out of his extraordinary state. He answered our questions and asked us some of his own, but his attention seemed distracted by his hallucination about a beach and a ship. He kept interpolating observations concerning some boat and the davits and sails filling with the wind. It made one feel queer, in the dusky laboratory, to hear him saying such things.

He was blind and helpless. We had to walk him down the passage, one at each elbow, to Boyce's private room, and while Boyce talked to him there, and humored him about this ship idea, I went along the corridor and asked old Wade to come and look at him. The voice of our dean sobered him a little, but not very much. He asked where his hands were, and why he had to walk about up to his waist in the ground. Wade thought over him a long time—you know how he knits his brows—and then made him feel the couch, guiding his hands to it. "That's a couch," said Wade. "The couch in the private room of Professor Boyce. Horsehair stuffing."

Davidson felt about, and puzzled over it, and answered presently that he could feel it all right, but he couldn't see it.

"What do you see?" asked Wade. Davidson said he could see nothing but a lot of sand and broken up shells. Wade gave him some other things to feel, telling him what they were and watching him keenly.

"The ship is almost hull down," said Davidson presently, apropos of nothing.

"Never mind the ship," said Wade. "Listen to me, Davidson. Do you know what hallucination means?"

"Rather," said Davidson.

"Well, everything you see is hallucinatory."

"Bishop Berkeley," said Davidson.

"Don't mistake me," said Wade. "You are alive, and in this room of Boyce's. But something has happened to your eyes. You cannot see, you can feel and hear, but not see. Do you follow me?"

"It seems to me that I see too much." Davidson rubbed his knuckles into his eyes. "Well?" he said.

"That's all. Don't let it perplex you. Bellows here and I will take you home in a cab."

"Wait a bit." Davidson thought. "Help me to sit down," said he presently, "and now—I'm sorry to trouble you—but will you tell me all that over again?"

Wade repeated it very patiently. Davidson shut his eyes, and pressed his hands upon his forehead. "Yes," said he. "It's quite right. Now my eyes are shut I know you're right. That's you, Bellows, sitting by me on the couch. I'm in England again. And we're in the dark."

Then he opened his eyes. "And there," said he, "is the sun just rising, and the yards of the ship, and a tumbled sea and a couple of birds flying. I never saw anything so real. And I'm sitting up to my neck in a bank of sand."

He bent forward and covered his face with his hands. Then he opened his eyes again. "Dark sea and sunrise! And yet I'm sitting on a sofa in old Boyce's room. God help me!"

That was the beginning. For three weeks this strange affection of Davidson's eyes continued unabated. It was far worse than being blind. He was absolutely helpless, and had to be fed like a newly hatched bird and led about and undressed. If he attempted to move, he fell over things or struck himself against walls or doors. After a day or so he got used to hearing our voices without seeing us, and willingly admitted he was at home and that Wade was right in what he told him. My sister, to whom he was engaged, insisted on coming in to see him, and would sit for hours every day while he talked about this beach of his. Holding her hand seemed to comfort him immensely. He explained that when we left the college and drove home it appeared to him as if we drove right through a sandhill—it was perfectly black until he emerged again—and through rocks and trees and solid obstacles, and when he was taken to his own room it made him giddy and almost frantic with the fear of falling, because going up stairs seemed to lift him 30 or 40 feet above the rocks of his imaginary island. He kept saying he should smash all the eggs. The end was that he had to be taken down to his father's consulting room and laid upon a couch that stood there.

I remember one odd thing, and that was he wanted very badly to smoke. We put a pipe in his hands—he almost poked his eye out with it—and lit it. But he couldn't taste anything. I've since found it's the same with me—I don't know if it's the usual case—that I cannot enjoy tobacco at all unless I can see the smoke.

He described the island as being a bleak kind of place on the whole, with very little vegetation, except some peaty stuff and a lot of bare rock. There were multitudes of penguins, and they made the rocks white and disagreeable to see. The sea was often rough and once there was a thunderstorm, and he lay and shouted at the silent flashes. Once or twice seals pulled upon the beach, but only on the first two or three days. He said it was very funny the way in which the penguins used to waddle right through him, and how he seemed to lie among them without disturbing them.

But the queerest part of his vision came when Wade sent him out in a bath chair to get fresh air. The Davidsons hired a chair and got that deaf and obstinate dependent of theirs, Widgery, to attend to it. My sister met them in the lower town, Widgery trotting along complacently, and Davidson evidently most distressed, trying in his feeble, blind way to attract Widgery's attention.

He positively wept when my sister spoke to him. "Oh, get me out of this horrible darkness!" he said, feeling for her hand. "I must get out of it, or I shall die." He was quite incapable of explaining what was the matter, but my sister decided he must go home, and presently, as they went up the hill, the horror seemed to drop from him. He said it was good to see the stars again, though it was then about noon and a blazing day.

"It seemed," he told me afterward, "as if I was being carried irresistibly toward the water. I was not very much alarmed at first. Of course, it was night there—a lovely night."

"Of course?" I asked, for that struck me as odd.

"Of course," said he. "It's always night there when it is day here. Well, we went right into the water, which was calm and shining under the moonlight—just a broad swell that seemed to grow broader and flatter as I came down into it. The surface glistened just like a skin—it might have been empty space underneath for all I could tell to the contrary. Very slowly, for I rode slanting into it, the water crept up to my eyes. Then I went under and the skin seemed to break and heal again about my eyes. The moon gave a jump up in the sky and grew green and dim, and fish, faintly glowing, came darting round me, and things that seemed made of luminous glass, and I passed through a tangle of seaweeds that shone with an oily luster. And so I drove down into the sea, and the stars went out one by one and the moon grew greener and darker and the seaweed became a luminous purple red. It was all very faint and mysterious and everything seemed to quiver. And all the while I could hear the wheels of the bathchair creaking and the footsteps of people going by and a man with a bell crying coals.

"I kept sinking down deeper and deeper into the water. It became inky black about me, not a ray from above came down into that darkness, and the phosphorescent things grew brighter and brighter. The snaky branches of the deeper weeds flickered like the flames of spirit lamps, but after a time there were no more weeds. The fishes came staring and gaping toward me and into me and through me. I never imagined such fishes before. They had lines of fire along the sides of them, as though they had been outlined with a luminous pencil. And there was a ghastly thing swimming backward with a lot of twining arms.

"And then I saw, coming very slowly toward me through the gloom, a hazy mass of light that resolved itself as it drew nearer into multitudes of fishes, struggling and darting round something that drifted. I drove on straight toward it, and presently I saw in the midst of the tumult, and by the light of the fish, a bit of splintered spar looming over me and a dark hull tilting over and some glowing phosphorescent forms that were shaken and writhed as the fish bit at them. Then it was I began to try to attract Widgery's attention. A horror came upon me. Ugh! I should have driven right into those half eaten—things. If your sister had not come! They had great holes in them, Bellows, and—never mind. But it was ghastly!"

For three weeks Davidson remained in this singular state, seeing what at the time we imagined was an altogether phantasmal world, and stone blind to the world around him. Then, one Tuesday, when I called, I met old Davidson in the passage. "He can see his thumb!" the old gentleman said, in a perfect transport. He was struggling into his overcoat. "He can see his thumb, Bellows!" he said, with the tears in his eyes. "The lad will be all right yet."

I rushed in to Davidson. He was holding up a little book before his face and looking at it and laughing in a weak kind of way.

"It's amazing," said he. "There's a kind of patch come there." He pointed with his finger. "I'm on the rocks, as usual, and the penguins are staggering and flapping about as usual, and there's been a whale showing every now and then, but it's got too dark now to make him out. But put something there, and I see it—I do see it. It's very dim and broken in places, but I see it all the same, like a faint specter of itself. I found it out this morning while they were dressing me. It's like a hole in this infernal phantom world. Just put your hand by mine. No—not there. Ah, yes! I see it. The base of your thumb and a bit of cuff! It looks like the ghost of a bit of your hand sticking out of the darkling sky. Just by it there's a group of stars like a cross coming out."

At first he was unfeignedly glad and seemed only too anxious to complete his cure by taking exercise and tonics. But as that odd island of his began to fade away from him he became queerly interested in it. He wanted particularly to go down into the deep sea again, and would spend half his time wandering about the lower town, trying to find the water logged wreck he had seen drifting. The glare of real daylight very soon impressed him so vividly as to blot out everything of his shadowy world, but in the nighttime, in a darkened room, he could still see the white splashed rocks of the island and the clumsy penguins staggering to and fro. But even these grew fainter and fainter, and at last, soon after he married my sister, he saw them for the last time.

And now to tell of the queerest thing of all. About two years after his cure I dined with the Davidsons, and after dinner a man named Atkins called in. He is a lieutenant in the royal navy, and a pleasant, talkative man. He was on friendly terms with my brother-in-law, and was soon on friendly terms with me. It came out that he was engaged to Davidson's cousin and incidentally he took out a kind of pocket photograph case to show us a new rendering of his fiancee. "And, by the way," said he, "here's the old Fulmar."

Davidson looked at it casually. Then suddenly his face lit up. "Good heavens!" said he. "I could almost swear"—

"What?" said Atkins.

"That I had seen that ship before."

"Don't see how you can have. She hasn't been out of the South seas for six years, and before then"—

"But," began Davidson, and then: "Yes. That's the ship I dreamed of. I'm sure that's the ship I dreamed of. She was standing off an island that swarmed with penguins and she fired a gun."

"Good Lord!" said Atkins. "How the deuce could you dream that?"

And then, bit by bit, it came out that on the very day Davidson was seized H. M. S. Fulmar had actually been off a little rock to the south of Antipodes island. A boat had landed overnight to get penguins' eggs, had been delayed, and a thunderstorm drifting up the boat's crew had waited until the morning before rejoining the ship. Atkins had been one of them, and he corroborated, word for word, the descriptions Davidson had given of the island and the boat. There is not the slightest doubt in any of our minds that Davidson had really seen the place. In some unaccountable way, while he moved hither and thither in London, his sight moved hither and thither in a manner that corresponded about this distant island. How is absolutely a mystery.

That completes the remarkable story of Davidson's eyes. It's perhaps the best authenticated case in existence of a real vision at a distance. Explanation? There is none forthcoming, except what Professor Wade has thrown out. But this explanation invokes the fourth dimension and a dissertation on theoretical kinds of space. To talk of there being "a kink in space" seems mere nonsense to me; it may be because I am no mathematician. When I said that nothing would alter the fact that the place is 8,000 miles away, he answered that two points might be a yard away on a sheet of paper and yet be brought together by bending the paper round.—English Illustrated Magazine.

Working In Powder Mills.

Apart from the danger of explosions, which, by the way, are less frequent than is generally supposed, gunpowder mills are exceedingly healthful places. Such a thing as a workman dying of consumption is unheard of, the explanation being that the constant breathing into the lungs of dust containing charcoal, sulphur and saltpeter is beneficial to them. As to the death rate in powder mills, the popular ideas are much exaggerated, the average freight yard being vastly more fatal than they. Statistics show that from the beginning of this century, when the Du Pont powder mills were established, up to the present year, there has been an average of not quite one death a year from accidents or explosions.

As among the employers, so among the men, fear is almost unknown, the black faced fellows shoveling the gunpowder about as if it were coal and walking through it knee deep, as they would through so much flour. They are perfectly happy, these stolid Irishmen, who go on risking their lives year after year for about the same wages as are paid in less dangerous employments—that is, $40 or $50 a month. And yet they are exceedingly superstitious, it being not uncommon for a man to throw up his job because he has had a warning or his wife has dreamed of a white horse. There are various dreams understood by powder men to foretell an accident or an explosion, and it is very difficult, often impossible, to get a man who has had one of these to go near the works.—McClure's Magazine.

The New York Young Man.

On Sunday morning the west side of Fifth avenue is thronged with church parade. There one sees in all his splendor the New York young man. Somehow, notwithstanding all his efforts to be English, he never quite effects it. Either his hat is too curly, his coat too long, or his trousers overpressed. He looks like an advertisement for a fashionable Manchester tailor, and represents the wide difference between gentlemanly and a gentleman. My impression is, by the way, they will never be able to produce the breed of American gentlemen until they manage to buy up and transplant an English public school, with all its traditions and style. At present the gilded youth here seem to be in the transition stage between the cowboy and the masher; they talk very low, between their teeth; they call each other "old man," and describe the theater last night as the "rottenest show," but next minute out leaps the cowboy, either in manners or talk, and the temporary illusion is gone.—Temple Bar.

A Queer Recipe.

In an old black letter translation of Albertus Magnus the donkey figures in the following extraordinary recipe: "Take an Adder's skyn, and Auri pigmentum, and greeke pitch of Reupontieum, and the waxe of newe Bees, and the fat or grease of an Asse, and breake them all, and put them all in a dull seething pot full of water, and make it to seeth at a glowe fire, and after let it waxe cold, and make a taper, and every man that shall see light of it shall seeme headlesse."—Gentleman's Magazine.

The recommendation of "Anchor," "Eckstein," "Beymer-Bauman," "Armstrong & McKelvy," "Davis-Chambers," "Fahnestock," "Morley," to you by your merchant is an evidence of his reliability, as he can sell you cheap ready-mixed paints and bogus White Lead and make a larger profit. Saturday night a gang of about twenty five young colored men congregated in Miles Collins' saloon on east Wayne street and engaged in a crap game, for a dollar a shot One of the participants lost his only dollar and tipped the game off to the night police, who swooped down on the gang without a moment's warning and succeeded in capturing several inmates of the room.

Three strangers who belong at the race-track were among those captured in the raid. They gave their names as Bob Williams, Alex McElroy and Albert Martin. When arraigned before the mayor this morning they pleaded not guilty to charges of gambling, claiming they had just entered the saloon to get a glass of beer. They were locked up again, and their cases set for hearing at 4 o'clock this evening.

Bert Shaffer and Chas Sharp were two more of the victims, but they were not captured until yesterday. Shaffer confessed that he was running the game and was fined $20 and costs. CHILDREN'S DAY

Celebrated at Calvary Reformed Church Last Evening

A very large audience gathered on last evening at the mission, and before the evening was over they were convinced that a great work has been done by the English Reformed church, which started this mission Sunday school in eastern part of Lima a little more than a year ago

The program, furnished by Rev Rufus Miller, the genial Sunday school secretary, was used, entitled "Beautiful Zion," which, by songs and speeches by the school and individuals, presented the idea of the church as the spiritual temple of which Christ is the chief corner stone upon and which we all are to be builded as "living stones."

It was a very joyous occasion for old and young, and it is evident that God is blessing the efforts of the many faithful and pains-taking teachers and workers of this mission.

A liberal collection was lifted for the prosecution of this Sunday school missionary work in other fields where it is needed.

It is the policy of the Reformed church to establish missions only in such fields as are absolutely in need of such work, and the increase and blessing is accordingly following

THE MONROE DOCTRI

Uncle Sam May Get Ano Interpretation Shortly.

GERMANY WILL LIKELY MAK

She Is After an Island Off the Ven ... Coast For a Naval Station ... Question May Assume as Formi ... an Aspect as That of the B ... Aggression in That Section.

WASHINGTON, June 18 —There i ... to believe that the United S government will have occasion a distant day to get another interpret of the Monroe doctrine as applical the acquisition of an island off the of Venezuela to be used by German a naval station. The attention o cials recently has been directed t interests of Germany in that loc and there is apprehension that the tion may assume quite as formidab aspect as that of British aggress Venezuelan soil.

An enormous amount of German tal has been invested in Venezue late under peculiar circumstances. government wanted a railroad thr a rich and productive valley, and a man syndicate stood ready to buil ... on condition that Venezuela guarantee 7 per cent of the capit vested.

The guarantee was given and the completed and put into operation eight months ago. At the outset supposed that $4,000,000 would cov cost of the road, but the actual c reached about $8,000,000. By the of the guarantee Venezuela now comes responsible to the German cate for a 7 per cent return on $8,000,000.

The road has not been in ope long enough to determine what earn, but its most sanguine pro do not hope that it will pay 7 pe on the outlay. Whatever it earn be applied on the investment, and ezuela will then have to give suf to bring the earnings up to 7 per c

It is said to be this and simila man interests that are inclinin German government to regard w vor the acquisition of an island Venezuelan coast, to be used as a station and as a sort of base of oper for Germany on the American nent.

The guarantee of Venezuela German syndicate is of a private acter, the German government no interest in the matter, bu looked upon as affording a conv means by which the government, ing protection to its citizens, cou carry out its desires for the acqu of a naval station.

The circumstances are such as to the belief that the United Sta again be called upon to define t extent the acquisition of territ foreign powers, on South Americ is compatible with the Monroe do

Great Britain already posses island at the mouth of the Orin which a powerful naval station h established. There are two other nearby, owned by Venezuela, e which would be well adapted many's needs. There is anoth island further up the coast, but stitutes a province of Venezuela, people have such intense loyalty ezuela that they have been name Spartans" They would undo resist any separation even if Ve assented to it.

At the moment that this phase of the Venezuela question ing its appearance the British br the subject is presenting a more able aspect. Official intellige recently reached her that Sir Barrington, representing the tensive British interests in Ve has most strongly urged upon t ish government the importanc amicable settlement with Vene a means of protecting British ments in that country.

Since the withdrawal of th minister at Venezuela, as a resu boundary trouble, Sir Vincent ton has stood as the repres Briton in that country. He i head of the syndicate of Lond talists who built a railroad from to Laguayara, thus connecting tal with the chief seaport.

At Laguayara the syndicate artificial harbor with breakwa stone wharves at a cost of sev lions. Sir Vincent manages tensive British interests, and hi that they can be fostered best tlement with Venezuela will have an important influence foreign office.

Senor Andrade, the Venezuel ter here, when asked as to G purposes, said he had not been of any intention to acquire o Venezuela islands for a naval although he was acquainted wi vestment of German capital in road and the guarantee give Venezuelan government.

The information reaching th ties here, however, has come f sources. It is believed that United States minister to V Mr. Thomas, who has just le post, is fully conversant with man phase of the subject. It stood also that the new Germ ter who is soon to arrive is like a full understanding of Gern dres concerning Venezuela.
